Student support for travel also is available. The IARR Board of Directors is pleased to announce that $17,000 USD will be allocated toward student travel awards for the conference. IARR will strive to make these awards available to all students who apply. They are in the process of finalizing a procedure whereby members of the IARR Finance Committee will solicit applications and make awards. Stay tuned for further information. (Please note that this initiative is separate from (1) $3,000 USD that has been allocated towards International 2024 Travel Awards, available to all IARR scholars (except students and with priority to underrepresented countries -- see the following paragraph below), and (2) $2,000 USD that has been allocated towards two DEI Travel Awards).

IARR is offering 2 to 6 _International 2024 Travel Awards_ (for a total amount of $3,000) to IARR members from any region of the world, with priority given to IARR members from countries currently underrepresented in the membership base. Submissions for late-breaking research posters are now open! Do you have exciting work that you want to share at IARR but missed the regular submission deadline? Great news! Submissions for late-breaking research posters will be accepted until April 15, 2024, and submission decisions will be emailed in late April 2024.

Submissions are invited on topics relevant to the research, teaching, and practice of social and personal relationships. Submitters will be required to submit _two abstracts_: (a) a short abstract (100 words or less to appear in the conference program), and (b) a long abstract (350 words or less to be reviewed). Priority for poster acceptance will be given to projects with data collection completed before submission. Authors of accepted posters are expected to register for the conference and to travel to Boston to present their work in person.
